

The “Not It” Test

The loop does not necessarily mean the answer is wrong. It may mean that what the answer is supposed to address has never been made clear.

01 What is the exact question that keeps returning?

02 What is the best answer you already have?

03 What, specifically, is still missing from it?

If step 03 names something specific, there is something to investigate. If all that remains is “this still is not it,” this is where the loop begins.
